'Show me where it says I can't'

Medical World News reports the case of a man in Heilbronn, Germany, who resisted when his wife told him she had stopped taking the pill and wanted a baby.

Not ready for a family, he decided to take matters into his own hands.

He read the instructions which directed that the first pill be taken on the fourth day after onset of menstruation. After ascertaining these dates from his wife he took the pills.

He continued to take them for seven years and his wife had six children.

The story came to light when the man was hospitalized for a foot operation. Asked by the anesthesiologist what medications he took, he said, "the pill."

Told by the astonished doctor the pill is for only women, the husband replied, "It didn't say that in the instructions."

Letters:

COLLEGE ASSEMBLY

Recently I was invited for a lunch at Simon Fraser University. Opposite me sat a young lady. As we got into the customary polite conversation, we found out that we both were instructors at the same institution. Yet during the two years we both had happened to teach at Douglas College our paths never crossed. I am sure this example could be multiplied many times. Apart from the personal loss of not knowing one's colleagues I am certain that such a state of affairs also has negative effects on the "inner life" of our College, especially as our ideal remains a united, cohesive institution, fully intent on staying so in spite of a certain Report.

When our College started, we had a "College Assembly" at whose meetings all employees - administrators, instructors and support staff - got together informally to discuss, without pressure or confrontation, any topic of concern to individuals and groups. It also served the purpose of mutually keeping in touch which, owing to our growing heterogeneity, is not easy. Perhaps the College Assembly held too many meetings for its own good; maybe the inevitable preoccupation with one's particular task was not conducive to the continuation of College-wide meetings. However, I believe that it still has a place in our general scheme of things although I would suggest that it meet less frequently. At any rate, a general effort ought to be made to attend an occasional College-wide get-together.

From the "legal" point of view it must be stressed that the College Assembly as an institution was never abolished; thus it is not dead but dormant. I suggest that we revive it and give it another trial before we disperse for summer. Should the experiment be successful, we shall be richer for it; should it fail, let us bury the College Assembly decently. A proper funeral is tidier than an unburied corpse but a live and functioning organism still better.

NOTICE OF MEETING, April 8/76

The Federation of Mountain Clubs of B.C. in co-operation with the Forestry School B.C.I.T. are sponsoring an evenings in depth look at the B.C. Forest Service Folio System.

Wm. Young, Asst. Chief Forester, Resource Planning, B.C. Forest Service will set the stage with an illustrated talk. A pannel of five people, representing B.C. Forest Products, the B.C. Fish & Wildlife Branch, the Sierra Club, MacMillan Bloedel and the Fisheries & Marine Service, Environment Canada will comment on their involvement in Folio planning.

This is planned as an information session, not a confrontation. The object is to inform members of clubs about folios and how they can contribute data into this important aspect of co-ordinated resource management planning.

Prior to the development or approval of logging plans, roads, etc., the B.C. Forest Service in conjunction with industry & other agencies collects data on forest cover, soil, geology, climate, water resources, mining, fish & wildlife and recreation on each specific watershed. The data is then compiled on maps to assist in the evaluation of all of the resources. Cutting plans can then be prepared so that other resources sensitive to the effects of logging may be protected, or special constraints developed: eg. trail relocation. Within the Vancouver Forest District there are approximately fifty watersheds on which folios are currently being prepared.

The date: THURSDAY APRIL 8, 1976.

Room 197 (Auditorium)

B.C.I.T. 3700 Willingdon, Burnaby.

TIME: 7:30 p.m.
